four irish typefaces

Céilí · Carrick · Kilfane · Tuam Uncial — winners of the 1978 “Design an Irish Typeface” competition, sponsored by Letraset, Kilkenny Design Workshops and D. O’Sullivan Graphic Supplies. Digitised 2026, version 3.000. No copyright is claimed: the fonts are in the public domain (CC0 1.0).

Céilí — Hermann Hecht, first prize. Carrick — William Curran, Highly Commended. Kilfane — William Curran, Commended. Tuam Uncial — Jarlath Hayes, Commended.

The faces were issued as Letraset dry-transfer sheets S53909–S53916 and sold through D. O’Sullivan Graphic Supplies, Dublin. Kilfane is reported on the Series C Irish banknotes; Tuam Uncial on Clannad sleeves and the Glenroe credits; Céilí on National Library of Ireland booklets.

These fonts were traced from the flyer shown here (left). Each was completed to about 400 characters: Irish with the traditional lenition dots and ꝉ, Scottish Gaelic, Welsh, and the Latin-script languages of Western and Central Europe, with kerning, mark positioning and the original alternates as stylistic sets. Glyphs not shown on the sheet were drawn to match each face.

The sheet shows one style of each. Version 2 adds new work drawn in 2026 from those regulars: an italic for all four, and a bold and bold italic for Céilí and Kilfane (Carrick and Tuam Uncial are already black).
